ACTOR GILLETTE THINKS LYME IS TOGETHER TOO MUCH

William Gillette, the actor, who has a summer place at Lyme, can't agree with the assessors and board of relief as to the valuation which ought to be placed on his property in the Lyme grand list and has taken an appeal to the superior court from the doings of the board of relief. They are $18,310 apart, as Gillette claims, and the board of relief has not enough, he claims.

An unfinished stone house on the property and the actor's boat with a dock and basin are the principal items in which there is a wide divergence in the estimate of values. Gillette says the house ought not to be assessed for more than $20,000 but the board of relief has made it $38,000. On the vessel and dock the actor puts a taxable valuation of $500, with $500 on the dock and basin. The board of relief sees a much greater value than that and calls the vessel and dock worth $4,000 for taxation while the dock and basin are put in the list at $2,000.

In the papers in the suit, Gillette says he put the property in the list before the assessors in October, 1921, at less than $25,000. The board of assessors made the valuation $71,360 on items as follows: Stone dwelling house, unfinished $62,000; stone house near dock $300; 17 acres of land $110, bicycle and motor-cycle $100, piano $150, vessels and boats $5,000, dock and basin $2,000.

Gillette complained to the board of relief of the amounts that had been assessed on his property and asked that by the state highest commissioner. The board of relief placed a total of $71,360 as follows: stone dwelling house, unfinished $29,000; stonehouse near dock $300, 17 acres of land $550, bicycle and motor-cycle $100, piano $150, vessels and boats $500, dock and basin $500.

The board of relief did make some reduction from the amount which the assessors had placed on the property but it was not enough to satisfy Gillette. The board of relief placed the valuation of his property at $58,860, stone dwelling house, unfinished, $50,000; stonehouse near dock $400, piano $150, vessels and boats $500, dock and basin $500.
